Even though Darcy came out of a litter of famous dogs she made her reputation all on her own. Not to be outdone by her famous father or even more famous sibling, Darcy (AKA "The Haglet") has always lived life on her own terms, and expected everyone else around her to do the same. When she did something it was her way. She did not walk across the drive, she skateboarded. She did not make one media event but became legendary for them. The Yellowbook TV commercial is a classic. She demanded life her way. Naturally, we complied!

She's always considered herself the best and brightest, and who among us would dare to disagree? Besides, she's probably right. Her brains and ability were passed on to her get. A line breeding to a brindle male produced eight brindle puppies and she expected her kids to suck it up and outshine her - no color barrier in her mind. She made the Bronze level ROM on this one breeding. After all once you get it right, why do it again? The offspring were conformationally exceptional and ran the standard in size with Billie being quite a large girl and Garbo looking more like her mother. If we had to improve on near perfection, an almond shaped eye is considered more desirable than a round eye, and a bit more size would be a plus.

With Vogue and Clean Run Magazines, and a Yellowbook TV commercial among her credits, Darcy charms people wherever she goes, and lives her life as the consummate diva. We are her devoted slaves.
